Certificate in Research Supervision

The Certificate in Research Supervision (CRS) at De Montfort University has been designed to ensure that all staff, especially those new to the role of supervising research students, are provided with sufficient opportunity to discuss the roles and skills required in supervising a research student. It provides information about the research degree regulations and procedures and the national and local context in which they are formed. The course also incorporates the skills required for successful supervision sessions and offers an insight into the viva process. The course enables supervisors to fulfil both the supervisory role and that of internal examiners effectively. The course runs five times a year and, during 2006-2007, around 100 supervisors completed the training.
